LONDON – 27 NOVEMBER 2015 – Phillips is pleased to announce the New Now auction which will be on view at 30 Berkeley Square from 2 December, and will take place on Wednesday, 9 December at 2pm. Offering approximately 250 works of art by both established and emerging contemporary artists, and with estimates from under £5,000, the auction presents accessible opportunities for collectors and is expected to realise £2 million to £3 million. The auction will also include the final part of works to be offered from the personal collection of the late Dr. Fredric S. Brandt, from which other works have been successfully sold at October auctions of Contemporary art in London, and the Editions auction in New York.

NATE LOWMAN
Red Maxima, 2005
Estimate £180,000 - 250,000

Tamila Kerimova, Head of the New Now Sale: “This is the first London auction to take place with the revised ‘New Now’ format, and it follows the success of the inaugural New York auction in September while building on the ‘Under the Influence’ sales of previous seasons. With an increased focus on the style and quality of these sales, we are excited to be able to offer such a diverse range of works representing both established artists of the late 20th century, and the younger generation, many of whose reputations continue to grow from season to season. We are also honoured to present the last selection of works to be offered from the Collection of the late Dr. Fredric S. Brandt, including exciting works by Latifa Echakhch, Pamela Rosenkranz, David Salle, Sterling Ruby and Tony Oursler.”
